July. They are up early and looking eastward to see the day break, when a ship is seen in the offing. She is far down on the horizon. Spy-glasses are turned toward her. She comes nearer—and look there is another and another. And now the hull of the Great Eastern looms up all-glorious in that morning sky. They are coming! Instantly all is wild excitement on shore. Boats put off to row toward the fleet. The Albany is the first to round the point and enter the Bay. The Terrible is close behind. The Medway stops an hour or two to join on the heavy shore end, while the Great Eastern, gliding calmly in as if she had done nothing remarkable, drops her anchor in front of the telegraph house, having trailed behind her a chain of two thousand miles, to bind the old world to the new.

Although the expedition reached Newfoundland on Friday, the twenty-seventh, yet, as the cable across the Gulf of St. Lawrence was broken, the news was not received in New-York till the twenty-ninth. It was early Sunday morning, before the Sabbath bells had rung their call to prayer, that the tidings came. The first announcement was brief: "Heart's Content, July 27.—We arrived here at nine o'clock this morning. All well. Thank God, the cable is laid, and is in perfect working order. Cyrus W. Field." But that was enough; and many who went up to the
